SHIFTING TRUST

MADONA SKAFF-KOREN

Tyler Demir left the RCMP after an undercover operation he was in charge of turned deadly. Refusing to make life and death decisions anymore, he now works as assistant head of security for a military funded Canadian nano-tech company. But when one of their scientists is kidnapped, the military send Tyler to England to retrieve him.

How the hell did he manage to go from a stress-free job, where lives didn't depend on his split-second decisions, to this?

“An intricate, compelling tale of secrets and betrayal, with a dogged, honourable hero and plenty of twists to keep you guessing.”

- Barbara Fradkin, two-time Arthur Ellis Award winning author of the Inspector Green series

Madona Skaff-Koren was a research technologist and now writes full time. She's published several science-fiction and mystery short stories.

One of her two recent stories, which appear in “The Whole She-Bang 2”, a Toronto Sisters in Crime anthology, was a Finalist in the Arthur Ellis award for excellence in Canadian crime writing.

She lives in Ottawa, Canada. Her dog's contribution to writing involves warming her feet.
